

SPANKING LAW RIGHT, HE SAYS

Justice Olmsted Tells Why He Authorized School Principals to Punish Unruly Boys in the Old-Fashioned Way.

"I am sure that in the old-fashioned country school the mischievousness was not repeated by the boy who was corrected in the old-fashioned way."

This is the comment made by Justice Olmsted today when he was asked to explain his decision in authorizing a school teacher to punish unruly boys by spanking them.

"Now, I do not want to be misunderstood as taking any stand in regard to corporal punishment," said Justice Olmsted to a Evening World reporter. "The matter simply amounts to this: Two boys were attending school. That is not a serious enough offense, in my mind, to send them to an institution."

"According to section 712 of the Penal Code, I had the power to vest the principals of the schools these boys attended with parental authority. That means that they can correct these children with the same impunity as a father or mother."

"Section 713 of the Penal Code runs: 'When a person under the age of sixteen years is convicted of a crime, he may, in the discretion of the court, be committed to the custody of a suitable person or institution willing to receive him, and be thereafter, until majority, or for a shorter term, subjected to such discipline and control of the person or institution receiving him as a parent or guardian may lawfully exercise over a minor.'"

"Boys are brought to the Children's Court time and again whose only offense is a spirit of mischievousness and unruliness at school. They are brought before me charged with a misdemeanor and the desire is to have them sentenced to an institution."

"Now, when I was a boy there were different means of correcting mischievous boys and enforcing discipline. It was not necessary to have a big policeman with a small boy before him, but justice and have him treated like an offender."

"I am sure that in the old-fashioned country school the mischievousness was not repeated by the boy who was corrected in the old-fashioned way."

"The Children's Court is repeatedly asked to help out the Board of Education and we are glad to do it, but it is a little strange that with all the trust officers and the big wheel of educational disciplinary system boys cannot be corrected."

"I know that it is forbidden by the Board of Education to inflict corporal punishment, and it will be in this case merely a question of which is the higher—the Board of Education or the law. I am not trying to override the Board of Education at all, but it is of no benefit to the community where a boy is simply a little unruly to have him brought here and sent to an institution. If he is only taken in hand and disciplined for his offenses by the guardian he will, nine chances out of ten, turn out a good citizen. Compare this with his chances when he is sent to an institution."

"The boy brought here charged with mischievousness, or with the only offense that is to be sent to an institution, is to be sent to an institution. This does not have the effect upon him that a little disciplining at school would have."

"No interference with Board. There is really no question of interfering with the rulings of the Board of Education, for the power given the principals is not new, nor under the law, and in the particular instances where they are under the law, nor under the Board of Education. They are not subject to the School Board any more than a child's parent or guardian would be."

"One instance of a boy, who was brought before me, a little fellow whose over energy had set in movement the great arm of the law and incidentally force of police officers, showed how the Board of Education system turns boys it cannot control over to the Children's Court."

"This little fellow climbed up in the school window and naturally attracted the attention of the other children. He was brought here charged with a misdemeanor. Now that boy could have been better than this. The teacher, as I have previously mentioned, of a country school could have convinced him that he had better not perform any more such tricks. But in this instance, as in many others, the school was incapable of correcting him."

"If a boy's parents do not correct him at home some one should be appointed who can administer such correction. Under his care the boys are sure to be for a definite period of time. Furthermore, the school has the right to administer the necessary discipline will hold boys in check."

"Boy Still Amenable. When I give the principal the parental authority that does not mean that the boy is free from future misdeeds. Of course, when I turn this boy over to the care of the teacher, I cannot impose a sentence also, but if the boy is found not to be amenable to discipline the principal can bring him here and he can be sent to an institution."

"I am not considering the greater number of cases brought before me from the schools as serious enough to send the pupils to institutions, but at the same time effective correction is necessary."

"The teachers given parental authority may use the rod or discipline the boy in any manner they see fit. Now there is no grounds for a clash between my decision and the Board of Education. I am not attempting to set any standard in regard to corporal punishment. I merely realize that judicious administration of punishment is better than the system practiced by the Board of Education."

"It is a pity that the Board of Education, or at least a part of it, has assumed the parental charge of boys, and when they do they are vested with a higher power than that of a parent. When you think of this, you will see that the school is a better place for a boy than an institution."

"I am sure that in the old-fashioned country school the mischievousness was not repeated by the boy who was corrected in the old-fashioned way."

ITALIAN CONSUL-GENERAL.

Count Raynaldi Massimo, newly-appointed Italian Consul-General at New York, arrived in the city today on the steamer Konic 2400 from Mediterranean ports. Mr. Massimo is former Italian Consul-General at St. Paul.

Noted Surgeon Believes in Dr. Martin

Says Alveolar Method Is Greatest Advance in Dental History—Call and Be Examined Without Charge—Illustrated Booklet Free.

Enthusiasm for Dr. G. Gordon Martin's New Alveolar Method of Dentistry is spreading throughout the scientific world, and recently in the course of a conversation with a prospective patient of Dr. Martin's a certain surgeon of Chicago, the most noted, in fact, of all American surgeons, and whose fame is as wide abroad as it is in his own country, expressed the opinion that Dr. Martin's inventions were startling and would have the effect of revolutionizing the profession.

The patient in reference, a well-known woman dentist, had called on Dr. Martin for a very difficult operation. He advised a certain procedure. It was so different from what other dentists advised that she hesitated about going through with it and sought the advice of this noted surgeon. He told her: "Dr. Martin's suggestion seems logical and practical. I know of no reason why it should not prove successful, and permanently so. This man has genuine ability, and in my judgment is on the right track. Dentistry has needed just such stimulus. It will make a real profession out of it. I have been very much interested in this Alveolar Method, and I predict great things for it and its inventor. My advice is that you go ahead and place yourself under treatment with Dr. Martin. His method seems odd because it is so different, but all new ideas in medicine have had the same to contend with."

Filling and Crowning Teeth. Other noted men of the medical profession have been equally enthusiastic after an investigation of Dr. Martin's method and his uniform success.

While naturally the most difficult dental cases come to him, yet he invites the simpler dental work too. It may be taken for granted that a man who knows his profession well enough to have discovered the Alveolar Method must have superior skill in treating decaying teeth, painful teeth, in crowning teeth, etc.

The Alveolar Method adapts itself especially well to filling and crowning teeth, and of course the crowning is done without bridge-work or any other such obsolete plan. Dr. Martin is using a new method of crowning teeth that all unbiased dentists will admit is far superior in appearance and permanency to the old method of bridge-work and gold backing. Dr. Martin can crown a tooth so that it is positively impossible to detect the crowned portion from any other tooth in the set.

In filling decayed teeth he is also able to render skilled service. Many a filling drops out, or remaining causes abscesses and inflammations because of the carelessness of the dentist. At Dr. Martin's office everything is done antiseptically, and every facility is at hand to make this a feature of the doctor's success.

It is no more expensive to have dental work done by the Alveolar Method than by the ordinary methods; and yet the former is more skilled, safer and permanent. Naturally which will you prefer?

No Charge for Examination. Any one can call at the offices of G. Gordon Martin, M. D., D. D. S. (inc.), Suite 704, 320 Fifth Avenue, N. Y. cor. 32d St., New York City, and be examined, counseled and advised free of charge. The doctor will do this for any one without obligation to the caller.

The doctor's illustrated book on Alveolar dentistry can be had free by personal or written request.
